

2014 Killarney Paddy's Weekend Adventure Race Formguide

This Sunday's Sport only level race licks off the season and has a very strong men's favourite in Castleisland's Jerry o Sullivan who is virtually unbeatable over the shorter distances particularly.

He has practiced extensively on the course and barring injury or similar he is the one they all have to beat.

Should Noel O Leary make the start line then he is favourite to take the runner up spot with Sean Tagney and Kevin Murphy other likely podium contenders amongst those with known form. Locally based Brendan O Brien is another that might figure in the top 6 along with Patrick Fitzgerald but at the head of affairs it is very hard to see O Sullivan being challenged.

The ladies race is a wide open affair with most of the competitors coming into this event with scant adventure racing form. Jill Barry had a good race at the Moxie last year and could go well here but with so many unknowns in the field it is very hard to call it.
